Excerpt: . . . 9 ground in different directions, only disturbing this one area and not all around this place. Is that correct LLRED Mr. A. Congressman, that is correct. HABOT Mr. C. Thank you. Madam Chair, I yield back my time. A ZQUEZ EL Chairwoman V. Mr. Shuler. Mr. S. Thank you, Madam Chair. HULER Mr. Secretary, thank you for your appearance today. The Federal Land Policy and Management Act charged the Bu-reau of Land Management with the responsibility of managing public lands and balancing a variety of uses. This includes recre-ation, natural resource development, grazing, and wildlife preven-tion. How does the BLM manage that based on small business practices, guided tours, hunting trips with guides How do they manage that based on the variety of things they are charged to do LLRED Mr. A. Congressman, our activities as we manage these lands are done pursuant to a resource management plan. Those plans are developed over fairly extended periods of time. In fact, some of them now have taken 7 years, that we are just finishing up. Those resource plans involve a tremendous amount of public input and are usually controversial because you are talking about conflicting uses. But our goal is to represent as many of those uses and make the smartest decisions we can with regard to that plan. Once the plan is then adopted, and that is a public process, with numerous public opportunities for input and...
