Excerpt: . . . camera. -- This was constructed so that simultaneous photographs could be taken from the two eyes. The lenses used are Goerz-Syntor, 12-inch focus. The mounting was necessarily complicated, in order that the focus might be accommodated to each individual subject. One adjustment was provided so that the two lenses could be separated or brought near together. A second adjustment allowed the left lens to move independently in a vertical direction. A third and fourth adjustment allowed the camera as a whole to be moved horizontally or vertically. A fifth and sixth adjustment permitted the lenses to be focused by independent movements forward or backward or by a movement of the filmholder. All of these adjustments could be made from the back by the operator by means of rods and screws. The body of the camera was made of a brass tube, eight inches in diameter and...

Reviews

This book is definitely not simple to begin on studying but quite fun to see. I actually have read and that i am sure that i will gonna read through yet again once again in the foreseeable future. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.
