A FRENCH OPPORTUNITY

A French Opportunity. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 244 pages. Dimensions: 8.5in. x 5.5in. x 0.6in. Travel dreams stir a young girl, who sways on a front porch swing in the unique town of Opp, Alabama, to escape to A French Opportunity. Aboard the front porch swing conducted as an imaginary train, she visits faraway places. She leaves her hometown with Jim, her young, funny as all git-out husband, riding in a 1957 Chevy, not her romantic train. Children max out her checkbook, breast cancer causes an ugly scene, and there's always more and more work to finish; yet somehow she finds her way to her true love - France. She writes passionately of this love, sounding like Paula Deen longing to be Catherine Deneuve, while never forgetting Opp, a town with front porch swings, not Eiffel Towers! Frances picturesque landscape and villages are shared from the viewpoint of a soft-spoken lady who says, Forget the grits and taste the wild mushrooms, and enters with a Bonjour y'all wearing a big smile under her floppy-brimmed chapeau. Debbie's storytelling is sprinkled with humor plus a few tears and lined with her southern speaking habit that she says is, stuck in my brain with super glue mixed with Brer Rabbit Molasses. Experience the beautiful variety of France when she sees fairytale castles, shops markets for antiques and junk, wanders country roads bordered with fields of poppies, tastes buttery croissants, and as she sleeps in farmhouses, B and Bs, and chateau hotels. Debbie, a mature mother of grown children, ventures on a solo trip to France leaving a husband and teenager behind. While in France, she is haunted by a Miami cars bumper sticker: Got Brains Driving a car without automatic transmission while juggling maps and guidebooks is a challenge, but she is a...
